She asked a blessing upon all her friends, including the Prices, and even Prince. But it was after that she put the timid question to Aunty Rose that proved to be almost too much for that good woman's studied calta.

"Aunty Rose, do you s'pose I might ask God to bless my mamma and papa, even if they are lost at sea? Somehow I don't think it would seem so lonesome if I could keep that in my prayer."

CHAPTER III.

"Well-She'll Be a Nuisance." Mr. Joseph Stagg, going down to his stare, past the home and carpenter shop of Jedidinh Parlow, at which he dd not even look, finally came to his destination in a very brown study. So disturbed had he been by the arrival of his little niece that he forgot to mestion and cross-question young Chetwood Gormley regarding the postible customers that had been in the store during his absence.

"And I tell you what I think, mother," Chet said, with his mouth full, at imper that evening. "I think her oming's going to bring about changes. Yes, ma'am !"

Mrs. Gormley was a faded little watnan-a widow-who went out sewing for better-to-do people in Sunrise Cove. She naturally thought her boy Chetwood a great deal smarter than other people thought him.

"You know, mother," he said, on this evening of the arrival of Carolyn with a mountainous sigh. May, "I never have seen any great nce to rise, workin' for Mr. Joseph

"But he pays you, Chet," his mother said anxiously.

Perhaps even Chetwood's assurance would have been quenched had he just then known the thoughts in the hardware merchant's mind, Mr. Stagg sat in his back office poring over the let.

On this evening he closed the store later than usual and set out for The Corners slowly. To tell the truth, Mr. Stagg rather shrank from arriving home. The strangeness of having a child in the house disturbed his tranquillity.

The kitchen only was lighted when he approached; therefore he was reassured. He knew Hannah's Car'iyn must have been put to bed long since.

noiselessly. Then it was that something scrambled up in the dark and the roar of a dog's barking made Joseph Stagg leap back in fright.

"Drat that mongrel!" he ejaculated, remembering Prince.

The kitchen door opened, revealing Aunty Rose's ample figure. Prince whined sheepishly and dropped his abbreviated tail, going to lie down again at the extreme end of his leash and blinking his eyes at Mr. Stagg.

"The critter's as savage as a bear!" grumbled the hardware merchant.

"He is a good watchdog; you must allow that, Joseph Stagg," Aunty Rose said caimly.

The hardware dealer gasped again.
